The screenshot shows the ProQuest Advanced Search interface. At the top, there are navigation tabs: Basic Search, Advanced Search, Publications, Browse, and Databases (16). The main search area is titled "Advanced Search" and includes sub-tabs for Command Line, Thesaurus, Field codes, and Search tips. A search box is highlighted with a red dotted line and labeled "检索框" (Search box). Below the search box, there are two rows of search criteria, each with a dropdown menu for "in" (Anywhere) and a "Search" button. A red callout labeled "字段选择" (Field selection) points to these dropdown menus. Below the search area, there are filter options: "Limit to:" with checkboxes for "Full text" and "Peer reviewed", and "Publication date:" with a dropdown menu for "All dates". A red callout labeled "其他限定条件：如文档类型，语言等" (Other filter conditions: such as document type, language, etc.) points to the filter sections. The filter sections include "Source type:", "Document type:", and "Language:", each with a list of checkboxes and a scroll bar. At the bottom, there is a "Result page options" dropdown and a "Search" button.

Abstract

Objective
 To determine secondhand smoke (SHS) concentrations in prisons during the week of implementation of a new, national prisons smoke-free policy.

Design
 Repeated measurement of SHS concentrations immediately before and after implementation of smoke-free policies across all 15 prisons in Scotland, and comparison with previously gathered baseline data from 2016.

Introduction
 Secondhand smoke (SHS) is a serious indoor air pollutant linked to many illnesses, including cardiovascular disease, cancer and chronic obstructive pulmonary disease.¹ Smoking bans in indoor environments reduce exposure to SHS² and improve health.^{3,4} SHS exposure has been a concern for workers who are or were occupationally exposed, for example, restaurant staff⁵ and airline cabin crew.⁶

Until recently, prisons had partial exemption from the Smoking, Health and Social Care (Scotland) Act 2005,⁷ which required smoking to be banned in public spaces. Partly in response to the perceived social importance of smoking in prison culture,⁸ prisoners were allowed to smoke in designated areas. Prisons were, thus, one of the few UK workplaces in which staff were exposed to SHS. Research in 2016 on indoor air quality demonstrated high concentrations of SHS in prison hallways and other areas within prisons.⁹ These results informed policy development with the Scottish Prison Service's Chief Executive calling the...
